Training on sex assault trauma wanted

THE CROWN

Prosecutors tell MPs the challenges they face in court

Ryan Tumilty
Metro | Ottawa

Federal judges may not be the only ones in need of training to better handle sexual assault cases.

A group that represents Crown prosecutors told MPs on Tuesday that they could use the training as well.

"We do not get adequate training and we particularly do not get training on the trauma of sexual assault," said Ursula Hendel, president of the Association of Justice Counsel.

The committee is studying a private member's bill from interim Conservative leader Rona Ambrose that would require that lawyers receive training on sexual assault before being eligible for federal judicial appointments.

Hendel represents federal Crowns, who only prosecute sexual assault cases in the territories, but she said provincial Crowns in her experience have many of the same challenges.

She said when she worked as a provincial prosecutor in Ontario it took years for her to get training specific to sexual assault. She said the training has to go beyond just the law, but training to understand how victims experience the system.

"You need to have survivors. You need to have professors. You need to have people who have studied the experience of sexual assault survivors," she said.

Committee vice-chair Sheila Malcolmson, the NDP MP for Nanaimo-Ladysmith in B.C., said the testimony showed that there is need for a broader plan.

"This takes me back to the commitment that the Canadian government made to adopt and implement a national action plan to end violence against women," she said. "This is just the kind of thing that would get caught in a national action plan."

Malcolmson said that, for now, Ambrose's bill focusing on judicial training will likely remain as it is, but the government should take a leadership role and look at the bigger picture.

"I would be surprised, pleasantly surprised, if we were able to get support for including training of prosecutors in the bill as well."

Thousands scanned by facial recognition kiosks

TRAVEL

But privacy commissioner yet to complete evaluation

 Dylan C. Robertson
For Metro | Ottawa

More than 47,000 passengers have been scanned with facial-recognition software at the Ottawa airport, despite the Privacy Commissioner still completing his independent evaluation.

Canada Border Services Agency (CBSA) rolled out its new kiosk March 20, as part of its plan to phase out paper cards on flights arriving from Canada. People can instead input their information on the kiosk, or through an offline app that produces a barcode — but both methods have the kiosk scanning the passenger's face.

Federal departments must complete Privacy Impact Assessments (PIAs) that identify potential privacy risks for new programs, along with how they plan to reduce them. The Privacy Commissioner doesn't approve or reject the PIAs, but his staff often make recommendations.

As Metro first reported,

CBSA only submitted its PIA on March 1. The commissioner's office says it's still reviewing the PIA, and told CBSA about the need for a PIA on Sept. 29 of last year.

A government-wide guidance mandates "that privacy implications will be appropriately identified, assessed and resolved before a new or substantially modified program or activity involving personal information is implemented."

CBSA President John Ossowski told Metro he stands by the timeline.

"Sometimes the timing gets done a little bit tighter than optimal, but (I'm) perfectly satisfied and we've taken privacy fully into account with these machines," he said Tuesday, as the agency presented its kiosks to media.

CBSA says online that "no personal information will be stored on the kiosk itself," but instead transferred through an encrypted connection. All data except for a photo is sent to Statistics Canada, while "information may be requested on a case-by-case basis by law enforcement partners" as well as the welfare and public health agencies.

Ossowski said the commissioner hasn't raised any issues yet, and says the kiosks will speed up customs lines. "For us, simply it allows our officers to focus on higher-risk travellers," he said. "Our systems already know whom we want to focus on."

The launch took place in the international arrivals hall at the airport as passengers from a United flight from Chicago queued for inspection. Staff demonstrated the machines in front of broadcast cameras, despite telling reporters not to film any incoming passengers.

GENDER EQUALITY
Falling short on closing the wage gap

 Alex Abdelwahab
Metro | Ottawa

Although Ontario has promised to close the gender wage gap, activists say the province isn't doing enough to follow through.

"The wage gap right now in Ontario, on average, is 30 per cent," said Carolyn Ferns, policy co-ordinator at the Ontario Coalition for Better Childcare, during a rally Tuesday to mark Equal Pay Day. "The government has committed to closing it and we hope they're serious about that and they're going to take action."

Activists say Equal Pay Day, which fell on April 11 in Ontario, symbolizes how far into the next year the average woman must work to make what the average man did the year before.

About 30 people attended the rally outside Attorney General Yasir Naqvi's office.

"That's the average," Ferns said. "We know that the wage gap is larger for women of colour, for immigrant women, for Indigenous women and for women with disabilities."

The province launched public consultations on the issue in 2015. The Gender Wage Gap Strategy Steering Committee delivered its final report with 20 recommendations in June 2016.

"We know that childcare is a key issue to close the gender wage gap. It was the number one issue that the government's own steering committee heard around the province," Ferns said.

High time for an overhaul

HERITAGE

Tender out for renovations on West Memorial complex

Ryan Tumilty
Metro | Ottawa

A massive, unoccupied government building in downtown Ottawa is getting a complete overhaul, with a tender now out for the project.

The West Memorial Building on Wellington Street runs between Bay and Lyon and is seven storeys tall, with two basement levels and a floor area equivalent to 22 hockey rinks.

It's connected to the East Memorial Building by an arch across Lyon Street.

The building, built in 1962, has sat unoccupied for several years because it received almost no upgrades since it was first built.

Nicolas Boucher, a spokesman for Public Works, said in an email that the building would be getting a complete overhaul.

"This construction project covers the West Memorial Building in its entirety," he said. That includes protecting the building's heritage elements and upgrades to the heating, electrical and sprinkler systems and some demolition of interior walls.

The arch connecting the two buildings is not involved in the overhaul, however. The department plans to protect the marble-clad entrance and the bronze and wood doors inside as well as the brass and bronze finish on elevators.

The government would not release a cost estimate for the project, because it's out for tender, but the tender identifies it as a larger project costing at least $5 million.

A massive project on this scale could spoil some of the Canada 150 fun, but the government has insisted that no work should take place between June 1 and Aug. 31 that can be visible from Wellington Street. It also doesn't want scaffolding or cranes on-site from June 23 to July 17.

The government is also eager not to let the project drag on with a strict one-year

Watson wants housing-first approach, motel last resort

Mayor Jim Watson is asking city staff to look at diverting some housing funding from putting families in motels toward helping them rent apartments.

Watson asked city staff to look at the issue after a new report from the Alliance to End Homelessness showed the city is housing hundreds of people a night in motels and spending millions per year.

In their annual report, the alliance initially reported that $12 million a year was being spent on housing families in motels, but after receiving updated information from the city confirmed it was $4.5 million a year.

Overall, the report showed more people are relying on shelters, especially youth and families.

Watson said the news is discouraging, but he hopes the long-term trend will still see more people finding housing.

"We want to see the numbers going in the right direction, but we also recognize that a lot of the measures we are taking are long term," he said.

"Maybe it's time for us to divert some money out of that and putting it into rent supplements, because living in a motel with a family is not a very positive experience," he said.

"I want to see the cost benefit analysis of how we can take a portion of that money that should be used for short-term emergency stays and put it into a housing-first approach."

He said one challenge they're facing is housing larger families.

"We just don't have a lot of five-bedroom apartments."

deadline for construction in the tender.

Pierre-Alain Bujold, another department spokesman, said the government is deciding who will ultimately occupy the building.

CLARIFICATION

Cost of housing families

Metro was given inaccurate information for the April 11 story "Shelters a Band-Aid solution." The city is housing an average 374 individuals (not 374 families) nightly in motels due to a lack of shelter space, and spending $375K (not $1M) monthly on hotel rooms for families. METRO

Gatineau mayor urges partnership

On the other side of the bridge lies a gem.

Mayor Maxime Pedneaud-Jobin

Gatineau's mayor made a direct pitch to Ottawa businesses Monday by asking them to consider his city's bilingual workforce, development opportunities and other assets in their growth plans.

Pitching Gatineau as "an exceptional economic partner," Mayor Maxime Pedneaud-Jobin delivered what he and local economic development officials believed to be the first speech by a Gatineau mayor to members of the Ottawa Chamber of Commerce.

He praised co-operation between the cities, highlighting joint work on tourism, policing and immigration, and his relationship with Mayor Jim Watson.

However, he came out strongly against the suggestion of more formalized joint planning in the National Capital Region by creating new bodies such as a regional transit commission.

"We must first talk about everyday realities — how do we make our routes connect (and) be more efficient?" He hopes Ottawa and Gatineau will soon complete the first official agreement on transit in the history of the two cities.

Transit officials are looking at how to integrate bus service with Ottawa's light-rail line, scheduled to launch next year.

He highlighted several of Gatineau's leading businesses, such as software firm Macadamian, renewable energy giant Brookfield and recycler Kruger. He touted reforms aimed at cutting red tape and attractions such as Gatineau Park, cycling trails and the city's claim to having the most hours of sunshine among major Quebec municipalities.

The city's bilingual workforce, he said, "is an asset for us, but is also an asset for you on this side of the river."

"On the other side of the bridge lies a gem, an exceptional economic partner ... As a region, we are much, much stronger when we work together." PETER KOVESSY/OTTAWA BUSINESS JOURNAL

Sens Mile good to go as Ottawa looks to take down Boston

Tamar

Fans in Ottawa are gearing up to watch the Senators take on the Boston Bruins in the first round of the NHL playoffs — and so are the city's bars and restaurants.

The playoffs are a busy time for Ottawa's bars, especially on Elgin Street, which transforms into Sens Mile during the playoffs. The first game of the series is tonight at 7:00 p.m., and Sens Mile will launch this afternoon.

Samuel Eyamie, manager of Fox and Feather Pub and Grill, said the bar will be at capacity.

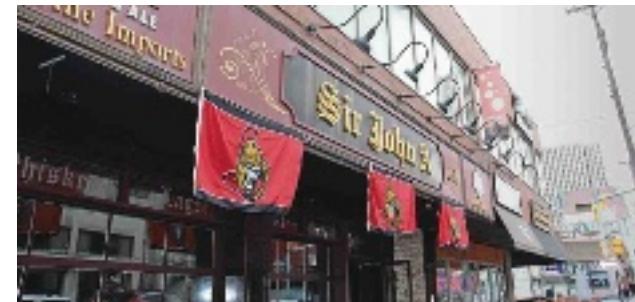

"If we go off past history, this place will be jammed well before the game starts," Eyamie said.

While restaurants in Ottawa are preparing for a big night, Senators playoff tickets on StubHub were, as of Tuesday afternoon, listed for around half of what other Canadian NHL teams were fetching.

The cheapest tickets available were $40, and the most expensive $250. The median price for Ottawa Game 1 tickets was $79 (all prices in USD).

For fans not watching the game at Canadian Tire Centre, nearly all establishments on Sens Mile will be streaming the game. The Fox and Feather has rented extra televisions for the playoffs "so that every spot in the restaurant is a viewing point for the Senators," Eyamie said.

URBAN PLANNING

Building bike lanes into the budget

Alex
Abdelwahab

For Metro | Ottawa

Coun. Jeff Leiper has joined municipal Ontario lawmakers to lobby Ontario to invest $50 million into cycling infrastructure.

In a letter sent Monday to the provincial ministers of Transportation, Finance, and Tourism, Culture and Sport, as well as the attorney general, Leiper asks the province to include cycling funding in the budget, writing "an investment in cycling infrastructure is an investment in safe access to public roads."

"Right now, there are a lot of very confident and relatively fit people cycling around," Leiper said. "There are a whole group of people that would like to be cycling, that see the advantages of cycling more, but they don't feel safe on the patchwork infrastructure that we have."

Leiper joined forces with Toronto city councillor Mike Layton and the Share the Road Cycling Coalition to draft the text of the letter. His office then worked for a few months to reach out to bike-friendly municipal councillors across the province to encourage them to sign on to the effort. Ottawa councillors David Chernushenko, Mathieu Fleury, Catherine McKenney and Tobi Nussbaum also signed on.

In 2015, the province announced a $10-million fund for cycling-infrastructure initiatives over two years. It funded 37 projects across the province, including the bike lanes on Mackenzie Avenue. Leiper said getting additional funding would help the city to accelerate a number of planned projects.

"The rumours are that the government is getting prepared to make a significant new second-round investment. I don't know whether that will be $50 million or not," Leiper said. "But we do have the anticipation that at least some new money is coming for cycling initiatives."

AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Social fund grows

Haley
Ritchie

For Metro | Ottawa

The city's planning committee approved changes to Ottawa's affordable housing reserve policy Tuesday.

The report aims to "simplify and clarify" the policy that puts a percentage of money made from the sale of city land into a reserve fund for new social housing. The sale of institutional land will now also be included.

According to the report, if institutional land had been included in the past 10 years, the fund would have received an extra $2 million. While around three-quarters of that money did eventually make its way into the reserve, the policy change will make it automatic.

"We have two governments that are helping and that have come to the table in a way that we haven't seen in a long time, and that's good news," said Coun. Diane Deans.

"We still have a significant housing affordability crisis in this city and it's not getting better," she said. "The city can't opt out of funding as upper-tier governments go in."

Israeli transgender officer stresses tolerance

Shachar Erez is the first transgender officer in the IDF.
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Shachar Erez recalls the day five years ago when, as an 18-year-old female Israeli soldier, the time had come to tell his commanding officer something profound about himself — that he believed he was a man.

He had already broken the news to his family, including his two younger brothers, and it had come as no surprise. When he was two, he asked his parents to cut his hair; at five, his dresses and skirts were tossed out.

But what would his army commander think? She was only 19, herself. "She only asked me one thing: 'How can I help?' It was amazing."

The answer changed Erez's life, and set him on a course to become an international ambassador of sorts for the Israel Defence Forces on LGBT rights after becoming its first and highest-ranking openly transgender officer.

It was in that role that he was in Ottawa recently to meet senior officials in the Canadian Forces, who are still in the throes of wrestling with their own policy on transgender issues in the military.

The Forces' long-awaited policy on transgender personnel was expected at the end of last year, but it now appears tied up in the broader policy review of the military.

How to better educate personnel to lessen the likelihood of discrimination and abuse is expected to be a feature of the new policy. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A 'deficient process'

DETENTION

Immigrants locked up based on dodgy risk assessments

Canada's border police have left vital records blank and said they lack the expertise to assess the risks posed by immigration detainees, documents filed in federal court reveal.

"I am not a medical or mental health professional," one Canada Border Services Agency officer wrote on a risk assessment form in 2015. "I have not received any training on the completion of the form. This assessment is cursory in nature and should not be construed as an accurate representation of the subject's risk or mental health status."

The form which the officer admitted he or she was untrained and ill-equipped to complete had real consequences for Kyon Ferrell, the immigration detainee in question, as it meant he would continue to serve his indefinite detention in a maximum-security jail rather than a less-restrictive facility.

Torstar's review of documents found erratic use of the form known as a National Risk Assessment for Detention, or NRAD. It is to be filled out when an immigration detainee is first incarcerated and, according to policy, should be reassessed every 60 days. The form determines in what kind of facility a detainee will be placed by classifying them as high-, medium- or low-risk.

The federal government runs three medium-security facilities dedicated to immigration detention, which are not full. But "high-risk" detainees are sent to maximum-security provincial jails, where, by the government's own calculation, two-thirds of the total number of immigration detention days are spent.

Asked to clarify the apparent discrepancy, a border services spokesman wrote in an email that the agency would not address Toure's case specifically, but that aggravating and mitigating factors could alter a detainee's designation. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"Very important decisions on people's basic liberty and security interests are being made in one of the most deficient administrative processes I've ever seen," he said.

Ebrahim Toure, a 45-year-old failed refugee claimant who was profiled last month as part of a Torstar investigation into immigration detention, has spent more than four years awaiting deportation at Central East Correctional Centre, a notorious maximum-security jail in Lindsay, Ont.

Toure, who is detained on the grounds that he is unlikely to appear for his removal, has often wondered why he is not at the Immigration Holding Centre.

He is not considered a danger to the public and had never spent a night in jail. Border services has said he was designated "high-risk" due to "criminality" in the U.S., which Torstar found consists of a conviction for selling pirated CDs and DVDs in Atlanta and a $1,000 fine for "reckless conduct." Neither offence led to jail time. According to the information presented at Toure's monthly detention reviews, he would seem to fit the "medium-risk" classification.

'The craziest act I've ever seen': a PR crisis for United

PUBLIC RELATIONS

Experts say airline totally fumbled on bumping fiasco

United Airlines is getting pummeled on late-night TV. Online, jokers are proposing new corporate slogans such as "We'll drag you all over the world" and "We have red eye and black eye flights available."

The cellphone video of airport police dragging a 69-year-old passenger off an overbooked flight has become a public-relations fiasco for United, with travel and experts saying the airline fumbled from the start and made matters worse with a tone-deaf apology from the CEO.

It's too soon to know whether Sunday night's incident at Chicago's O'Hare Airport will cause lasting harm. Many travellers go for the cheapest fare, no matter what the name on the plane. And United frequent flyers won't easily give up their miles.

Dr. David Dao of Elizabethtown, Kentucky, with his granddaughter and his wife Teresa. INSTAGRAM

Then again, there are those videos of the man being yanked out of his seat and pulled down the aisle on his back as other passengers gasped.

"That is the craziest act I've ever seen. Who drags a ticketed passenger off an airplane?" said

Bruce Rubin, a longtime practitioner of crisis public relations in Miami. "Because it's so visual and it's so unnecessary, it's the kind of thing that can hurt United long-term."

Just two weeks ago, United was at the centre of another PR furor after a gate agent in Denver barred two girls from boarding a flight because they were wearing leggings.

The man hauled off the plane, David Dao, a doctor from Elizabethtown, Kentucky, had been told along with three other passengers to give up their seats so that four employees of the company operating the flight for United could board. Dao was the only one to refuse.

To make room on the plane, United had tried to entice volunteers with travel vouchers worth $800 and a hotel room. When there were no takers, a United manager went on board and announced that four people would be removed.

Big mistake, say the crisis-management experts. Everyone wondered why United didn't simply sweeten the offer until four passengers agreed to get off.

"A few dollars could have solved this problem," said Allen Adamson, founder of Brand Simple Consulting in New York. "Instead, the damage of the brand will be millions of dollars."

One passenger equals a billion dollar mistake

4.4%

United Continental Holdings Inc stock. plunged 4.4 per cent early Tuesday, but had recovered somewhat before the closing bell.

The stock of parent United Continental Holdings Inc. plunged 4.4 per cent Tuesday morning but recovered and was off 1.4 per cent shortly before the closing bell.

Earlier in the day Tuesday the massive plunge in stock value knocking off close to $1 billion off the company's value before the stock bounced back a bit.

The recovery was attributed to a third and stronger mea culpa released by United CEO Oscar Munoz, in which he apologized for the "truly horrific event," saying, "No one should ever be mistreated this way." He promised a review of airline policies by April 30 and vowed to "fix what's broken so this never happens again."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who is Dr. David Dao?

The man dragged from a full United Express flight has been identified as physician Dr. David Dao of Elizabethtown, Kentucky.

Dao is a 69-year-old Vietnamese-American, a father of five, and grandfather specializing in internal medicine.

Media reports claim that Dao's wife Teresa, 69, is a pediatrician who trained at Ho Chi Minh University in Saigon and she also practices in Elizabethtown.

The violent incident aboard the United flight has reached the news in China, with many users accusing United of racism and calling for a boycott.

An 18-year-old Chinese student in the U.K. has even created an online petition calling on the U.S. government to investigate the violent incident.

"We are calling the federal government to launch an investigation into this incident. #ChineseLivesMatters," the petition says.

POLITICS

Spicer apologizes for comments

White House Press Secretary Sean Spicer apologized Tuesday for making an "inappropriate and insensitive" comparison to the Holocaust in earlier comments about Syrian President Bashar Assad's use of chemical weapons — remarks that drew instant rebuke from Jewish groups and critics.

Spicer said in an interview with CNN that he was trying to make a point about Assad's use of chemical weapons and gas against his people but "mistakenly made an inappropriate and insensitive reference to the Holocaust, for which there is no comparison. And for that I apologize. It was a mistake to do that."

During the daily White House briefing, Spicer told reporters that Adolf Hitler "didn't even sink to using chemical weapons." Critics noted the remark ignored Hitler's use of gas chambers to exterminate Jews during the Holocaust.

It was the second day in a row in which Spicer, President Donald Trump's main spokesman, appeared to struggle to articulate the president's foreign policy at a critical time. The White House generated criticism at the start of the year when a statement on international Holocaust Remembrance Day did not make any reference to Jews.

In the CNN interview, Spicer said his comments did not reflect Trump's views. "My comments today did not reflect the president's, were a distraction from him and frankly were misstated, insensitive and wrong." He added, "Obviously it was my blunder."

During the briefing, Spicer was asked about his initial statement but delivered a garbled defence of his remarks in which he tried to differentiate between Hitler's actions and the gas attack on Syrian civilians last week.

The attack in northern Syria left nearly 90 people dead, and Turkey's health minister said tests show sarin gas was used.

Google denies gender pay gap charge

EMPLOYMENT

Search giant accused of shortchanging female staff

Google said it's "taken aback" by the U.S. government's claim that it doesn't compensate women fairly.

The company said it conducts "rigorous analyses" that its pay practices are gender-blind and found "no gender pay gap" in 52 major job categories it analyzed last year. Google added that analysts who calculate suggested pay don't have access to employees' gender data.

Google also said that beyond gender pay equity, the company recently expanded the analysis to cover race in the U.S. as well.

The U.S. Department of Labor had accused Google of short-changing women doing similar work to men, saying it found "systemic compensation disparities" across the company's workforce.

Google responded in a blog post Tuesday that the department's assertion "came without any supporting data or methodology."

The difference between Google's and the Labor Department's claims might come down to how each side defines pay discrimination, Tim Worstall, a fellow at the Adam Smith Institute in London, wrote in a recent post for Forbes.

"Google is using a strict definition of 'same job' to find no gender pay gap. The Department of Labor is using a looser definition of 'similar job' to find that there is one," he wrote. "Who you think is right here is entirely up to you but that's where the disagreement is."

Moody's says Canada at risk from correction

Moody's Investors Service has released a report that identifies Canada as one of four Aaa-rated countries exposed to a potential housing market correction.

In addition to Canada, the report lists New Zealand, Sweden and Australia as countries that have seen the largest increases in home prices and household debt among advanced economies over the last three years.

"In Canada and New Zealand, a housing downturn would involve sizable spillovers to the broader economy through the supply chain and impacts on employment and consumption," the agency said.

EMMA TEITEL ON SUPPORTING THE WOMEN'S GAME

When I was a kid in the late 1990s, I attended a hockey camp at Seneca College in Toronto where the lead instructor was Angela James, a Canadian hockey legend dubbed the Wayne Gretzky of women's hockey by just about everyone who followed the sport at the time. A five-time world championship winner, James, in 2010, was one of the first women inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame in Toronto. She was also only the second black athlete, and the first openly gay athlete, to make the Hall.

My own interaction with James was less momentous, but maybe more profound. The second day at camp, I peed in my hockey pants. It didn't matter that none of the other campers noticed; I was mortified. But James was wise enough to see that something was amiss, and kind enough to escort me to the bathroom right away. "It happens to the best of us," she said, handing me a fresh towel. I returned to the ice dry and happy, and saved.

It was a high point in my hockey career (getting a pep talk from a star athlete, not peeing in my pants) but I've always wondered if it was a low point in the career of Angela James. When Wayne Gretzky retired he was left with wealth and fame and the option to live the rest of his life in a golden state of leisure and golf. Angela James, a woman hockey genius, was left with the need to continue working a full-time job to survive (just as she had to work while she was playing hockey), including the opportunity to chaperone

Part of the solution may lie in playing up the skills women have that men lack.

Until sports fans give women's teams the daily attention they give men's teams, nothing major will change for professional female athletes or their salaries

incontinent kids to the bathroom. Very few female hockey players in the '90s and early 2000s could support themselves — let alone live the high life — on their earnings as professionals.

Nearly 20 years later, not much has changed. Consider, as a recent example, the women of USA Hockey. Winners of the last three world championships, (and some of the best players that ever lived), last month they threatened to boycott this year's IIHF Ice Hockey World Championships, if their parent organization didn't meet the team's demands for fair pay and increased publicity. USA Hockey stonewalled the team almost until the eve of the tournament, then finally agreed to a new deal. Henceforth the American women will each receive a $2,000 training stipend every month, every year, and larger bonuses when they win medals at major tournaments.

As victories go, it's a precarious one, it seems to me. The source of the previous injustice still remains: general fan indifference to female team sports, except for a two-week period every four years when the Olympics are held. Until sports fans — men and, yes, women too — give women's teams the daily attention they give men's teams, nothing major will change for professional female team athletes or their salaries.

Angela James agrees. I know because I called her up recently. James, who still works at Seneca College today as the school's sports co-ordinator, wonders if what's holding women's hockey back is, in part, a desire to emulate the NHL.

"I'm not the smartest business person, but I know that any business needs to go smaller before they go bigger." A good way to do this? Barnstorm, argues James. Women's teams, even at a junior hockey level, might have more success shoring up a sizable fan base if they start grassroots, touring small venues, in small towns and cities. "Go to a smaller rink where you can fill a smaller rink," she says. Of course, Hockey Canada has no trouble filling the ACC when the national women's team is in town, but they play large-scale venues only a few times a year. This gives hockey fans a token look at the women's game, says James, and not a whole lot more.

Part of the solution may lie in playing up the skills women have that men lack. Men's hockey is speedier and more violent, no doubt, but the female game is arguably smarter. It rewards strategy over size and strength. Women's hockey is plenty tough, but knowledge of the game is paramount.

This is something Draymond Green, a power forward with the NBA's Golden State Warriors, sees when it comes to basketball. Green is a big fan of the WNBA. "In the NBA there's always a guy who is only around because he can jump," Green told Sports Illustrated last year. "He doesn't have a clue about the fundamentals. I learn more from the WNBA. They know how to dribble, how to pivot, how to use the shot fake."

They also know, presumably, how to work a second job, and possibly help out young players with bladder malfunctions. They may forget specific names and faces, but they don't forget the experience. Angela James, for instance, has no memory of helping me personally out on the ice, because, she says, I was one of several campers over the years who wet themselves mid-drill. Either way, she assures me the incident would "absolutely not" constitute a low point in her career. "Unless it was puke," she said. "I can't do puke."

The thing is, men rarely have to.

VICKY MOCHAMA

Forget what the boss says or the computer allows; just be good to each other

A company pays you for your labour — not so you can abdicate all moral responsibility.

By now, you've seen the video of a doctor being dragged off a United Airlines flight. For obvious reasons, it is upsetting.

But the more insidiously upsetting thing is that we have become inured to one another: Human beings enforced the company's rules.

News reports say United requested four people give up their seats in order to give those seats to ground crew. When no one on the flight volunteered, people were selected at random and told to get off the plane in exchange for vouchers.

The passenger pled his case: he had to get back to Louisville to see patients. But the airline's agents and security had already bought into the company's logic.

And because the man had not, he had to be forcibly removed, or in the parlance of United, "re-accommodated."

Defending their actions, the police say the passenger "fell." The video clearly shows that the police, shall we say, re-accommodated him into a non-standing position.

We have become used to a system that isolates us from each other and a logic in which the state protects companies from us. How often has a reasonable request been denied because "the computer can't do it?"

Corporations (and the state) have an interest in reinforcing our helplessness. And it's taught early.

The New York Times reports that New Mexico has outlawed "lunch shaming," when cafeteria workers shame kids whose parents haven't paid their school lunch bills. Children can be made to do chores in exchange for their lunch or branded with stamps and wristbands.

Let us set aside for the moment that one of the richest nations in the world can't feed the children it is educating. Let's focus on the smaller acts of intervention.

Lunch shaming is a sickening practice, but there are cafeteria staff who resist it. The Times reports that one worker had taken to paying some students' debt. Another had quit rather than deny food to children.

Most of us work for corporations with similar logic to United Airlines and school lunch providers.

Their goal is to maximize efficiency. But it doesn't have to be ours.

Because I lose my debit card as often as I possibly can, I have been grateful for the baristas who waved off my pitiful change, the bus drivers who waved me on when my pass didn't work, and the taxi drivers who got me home safe for free.

The gap between human empathy and corporate logic is not always as dangerous as being bloodied during a flight, but it can be, which is why we have a responsibility to resist it.

The world will not fall into anarchy if we exercise more compassion.

METROTALKS BARB STEGEMANN

'You're not going to fix the world in one night'

Subject of new documentary Perfume War on how to run an ethical business

Melita Kuburas
Metro | Canada

She's a half-Jewish, half-Catholic woman from Nova Scotia doing business with Muslim men in Afghanistan. At least, these are the facts people often bring up to Barb Stegemann, asking: How do they treat you?

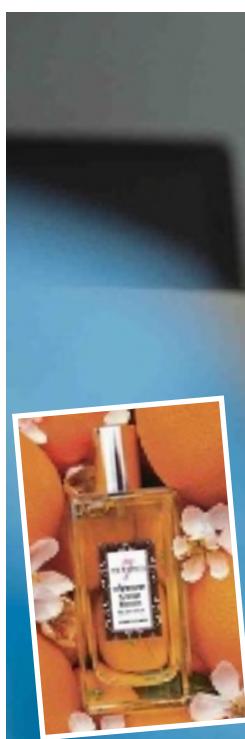

"The men in these countries treat me better than the white men in my own community," Stegemann says, always quick to point out that in Canada, we too live in a patriarchy.

"What's beautiful about ethical business is that they don't care what your gender is, or your faith. If you pay on time, you're good," says Stegemann in an interview with Metro's editorial team.

The founder and CEO of The 7 Virtues is the subject of a new documentary opening across Canada Friday called Perfume War, which profiles how she launched her fragrance business as a single mom, putting $20,000 of debt on her credit card.

Her motivation was an extraordinary event that changed many lives: In 2006 her best friend, Capt. Trevor Greene, took an axe to the head wielded by a member of the Taliban during what was supposed to be a protected meeting (shura) between Canadian Forces and tribal elders in Afghanistan. His attacker was an illiterate 16-year-old who was shot before he could strike again, but the first blow caused serious brain injury and left Greene unable to walk.

At his bedside in a Vancouver hospital, Stegemann vowed to continue Greene's peace-oriented mission. She found a supplier in Afghanistan named Abdullah Arsala who was selling essential oils to make perfume in an effort to derail the country's dependence on the dangerous

Barb Stegemann launched her perfume company, The 7 Virtues, after her best friend was seriously injured in Afghanistan. Capt. Trevor Greene (pictured left with Stegemann when they were both younger) was attacked with an axe by a member of the Taliban, which caused brain damage. Stegemann then decided to partner with a rose and orange blossom distiller in that country. LIZ BEDDALL/FOR METRO and illegally grown poppy crops, used to make opium.

She launched her company in 2010 and now, 7 Virtues' line is expanded to five fragrances with oils also sourced from distilleries in Rwanda, Haiti, Israel, and Iran, with national distribution in Hudson's Bay and Lord & Taylor in the U.S.

"You're not going to fix the world in one night, but if you start you'll look back in six years and say we've made a difference," says Stegemann, who is now ready to take her company to the next level. She has her eye on the Holy Grail of the beauty industry: Sephora.

Next week, Stegemann is travelling to San Francisco to take part in Sephora's accelerator program, which aims to support women in the industry. Only four per cent of CEOs in the beauty business are female, she says. The 48-year-old will be mentored on how to revamp her perfumes so that she can pitch to the company and get them on the retailer's shelves.

In startup years, The 7 Virtues is an old company. One of her challenges is to show she's willing to do anything to become a global brand.

"You have to show that you're not attached to your ideas and you're malleable," she says, of the program. "If you said to me two months ago 'Why don't you redesign your fragrances?' I would have been like, don't you dare!"

But now, she has hired a new perfumer with the ultimate goal to increase sales and buy more oils from her distillery suppliers. This brings direct benefits to those communities.

In Rwanda, for instance, a woman working for patchouli supplier Nicholas of Ikirezi earns three times the income a coffee crop worker makes; in Afghanistan, the rose farmers make twice that of illegal-crop growers.

So while Stegemann's mission has only just started — she still wants to make a perfume using oils from Palestine — her best friend, who has made remarkable progress on his recovery, is happy with all that she has been able to accomplish.

"Barb completed my mission," says Greene in the documentary. "Who would have thought..perfume?"

TIPS FOR A SOCIAL ENTERPRISE

- Partner with government agencies and NGOs

"Anyone who wants to be a social entrepreneur should have their supplier pre-qualified so you can feel safe knowing you're working with someone who's good to their farmers, not using pesticides, all the things you care about in your product sourcing," says Stegemann. She worked with CIDA, Building Markets, The Clinton Foundation and USAID.

- Ask a lot of questions ### of people you work with

"A social entrepreneur needs to be curious and be OK with 'no' and ask again. I didn't always get direct answers."

- Spend time to build trust with your partners

Stegemann says she is transparent with her suppliers, and is happy to bring them new business even if it means her company won't be so "special." "Over the years they see that you're not just in it for your oils," she says.

DO IT LIKE THE PROS

1 HOW TO BOIL AN EGG

Place eggs in a large pot or saucepan. Add cold water until eggs are covered by an inch of water. Bring water to boil. Reduce heat to simmer. Cover and let cook for 12 to 14 minutes. Drain and immediately submerge in ice-cold water for at least 20 minutes before peeling.

2 HOW TO PEEL AN EGG

A cold egg is less likely than a still warm egg to dent or stick to the shell when peeled. When cooled, remove from water and gently tap the eggshell all over. Peel the egg in a bowl of cold water to wash away any sticky bits of shell.

3 HOW TO STORE DEVILLED EGGS

Devilled eggs are best eaten immediately but can be made up to a day in advance. Store the cooked whites and yolk mixture in separate containers in the fridge and assemble just before eating. This also ensures the eggs don't fall apart or get crushed if being transported to a party.

Last year, Sheryl Crow started a petition on Change.org to shorten the U.S. presidential election cycle. The Grammy-winning singer-songwriter said she was exhausted by the constant mudslinging and divisive language.

"I felt like it was becoming so hateful that I had to watch to make sure my kids didn't pick up the remote and turn the TV on," she said, adding that it upsets her that technology and social media change conversation.

"Now we have this forum for haters to come out and say the worst thing you could possibly Hannah (Lena Dunham), pregnant, and Adam (Adam Driver) sit in a diner booth. It's been a remarkable day: Out of the blue, he told her he wants them to reunite. He'll raise her baby with her. She admits how frightened she's been of doing it alone.

They discuss moving in together. "I'm on the list for artist housing," he says. "They tend to favour married couples, though, so it might help if we did that."

Almost imperceptibly, Hannah blanches. But she natters on about joining a food co-op, "though I find the whole shift demeaning."

"I can do the shifts, if you handle the bills," Adam says.

She nods. But somehow she's crying. His smile fades.

Hannah doesn't speak. But the pain on her face says everything: As scary as it is to be alone, she can't be with him. She can't go backward. In the silence of her falling tears, we

This diner scene is everything. It encompasses an entire relationship, past, present and future, wordlessly. Did the script once have more dialogue? Did

SIOUX LOOKOUT

New health plan trying to fill gaps for First Nation communities

Providing medical services to an area as large as France is no easy task. Sioux Lookout and the surrounding region has 33 communities, and the majority of the 32,000 people living there are only accessible by air transportation. Covering the health needs of these communities is accordingly a formidable challenge.

Yet a new initiative from the Sioux Lookout First Nations Health Authority hopes to unite existing services to meet that challenge.

"Our communities are remote and poverty-stricken. Their health has become a state of emergency," says Dr. Terri Farrell, Sioux Lookout's medical director. "There's extremely poor physical and mental health in the region, with high instances of mental health issues."

So in February 2016, after a Health and Public Health emergency was declared for the region, an initiative was offered via the Ontario Indigenous Health Action Plan. "We could apply for an interdisciplinary and primary health care team at $3 million a year," says Farrell. "It isn't a lot for what we need. But it was the first step."

The plan would supplement the current setup of physicians and Health Canada nurses working in the region. "This would fill the gap of services," says Farrell. This comes in the form of 20 health care providers such as family physicians, nurse practitioners, dieticians, mental health workers, physiotherapists, occupational therapists and more. While the group would focus on children and youth health, it wouldn't exclusively serve that population.

Importantly these services are based on an outreach model. "While the head office is in Sioux Lookout, the focus is providing these services in the communities as much as possible," says Farrell. "It's a big initiative. That is why we need smart and dedicated people to deliver these vital services. We are looking for people that want to make a difference."

Know your angles before off-roading

Stephen Elmer

DO IT YOURSELF

How to measure angles

Take something long and straight like a broom or a yardstick and place one end exactly where the front tire makes contact with the ground. Take the other end and lift it until it hits the lowest point at the front of your car, often a piece of bumper. Use a protractor to find the angle compared to the ground — that's the approach angle. Repeat these steps at the back for the departure angle.

types of obstacles you can drive over without hitting your bumper while ascending or descending. Imagine a ramp. If the ramp is too steep and you try and drive up it, the front bumper of the vehicle will hit the ramp before the wheels have a chance to start climbing. So the maximum angle from the ground that the ramp can have without the front bumper colliding is known as approach angle, while at the rear end, it's known as the departure angle.

There is a third angle that is important for off-roading: the breakover angle. This is the angle between the bottom of your tires and the mid-point of vehicle's underside. If the breakover angle is exceeded, it will leave the vehicle turtled — where all four wheels come off the ground and lose traction.

Approach, departure and

Approach angles and departure angles determine whether you'll be able to tackle that ridge up ahead. iSTOCK breakover angles are governed by a number of vehicle design characteristics. The overhang of the bumper past the axles helps to determine ramp angles, along with the design of that bumper. An ideal off-roader will have a rounder bumper style or one that doesn't protrude unnecessarily.

The overall ground clearance of the vehicle will also determine what the ramp angles will be.

Some examples of excellent ramp angles come from vehicles like the Jeep Wrangler, with an approach angle of 42.2, and the Toyota 4Runner, with an approach angle of 33 degrees.

REVIEW

Drive boasts local cuisine and Equinox's best assets

Craig Cole
AutoGuide.com

At new-vehicle launches, it's always a bit suspicious when an automaker spends more time hyping the drive route or lunch stops than they do the product.

Chevrolet seemed proud of the area roads and local cuisine we would experience in the Carolinas when they invited AutoGuide.com down to Dixie for a test of their overhauled 2018 Equinox. There was no technical lecture or in-depth walkaround of this new compact crossover; only a marketing spiel on the second day. But this apparent caginess was unnecessary as the new Equinox is a solid product they have every right to be proud of.

One of their greatest feats was getting this vehicle to shed about 400 pounds, roughly a 10 per cent reduction. The body is nearly five inches shorter, something that helped, but this change had no ill-effect on utility. Maximum cargo capacity has been increased by around 99 litres. With the back seats folded down there's just shy of 1,812 litres available.

The Equinox's interior bears a strong resemblance to what's found in other recent Chevrolets. Largely made of low-sheen hard plastic, it nonetheless looks quite nice. There are high-quality soft materials where you want them, like the armrests and upper portions of the dashboard. Front or rear, seat comfort is admirable.

None of the offerings in the compact segment drive like sports cars and this Chevy's no exception. The 1.5-litre engine pulls strongest around 3,500 RPM. Power is adequate, but the vehicle is never particularly enthusiastic. Climbing the Blue Ridge Mountains around Asheville, North Carolina revealed that this crossover is a little taxed, moseying up the hills even at wide-open throttle. A full load of passengers and parcels would reduce vigor even more.

Still, on flatter terrain or lower elevations the performance provided is perfectly fine for a large swath of crossover customers. Buyers that want more giddy-up can always opt for the 2.0-litre engine.

If there's a downside to the way this vehicle drives it's the steering. I found it decently communicative but even with the optional lane-keep assist enabled the Equinox wanders, requiring constant correction to keep it within the lane markers.

Equinox offers a wide range of advanced driver-assistance technologies including low-speed forward automatic braking; blind-spot monitoring; rear cross-traffic alert; a visual parking aid; and a vibrating safety alert seat.

The 2018 Equinox doesn't necessarily feel like a best-in-class crossover, but it's certainly one of the better offerings. Efficient and refined, spacious and tech savvy, there's no reason why it shouldn't give rivals a run for their money in an increasingly competitive segment.

GIMMICKY AUTOMOTIVE FEATURES

Cars today are packed with more features than ever before. While most were developed with good intentions, some end up being no more than an advertising line. You know the ones; these features attract an awful lot of attention and might seem great in theory, but never end up being truly useful in real life. On that note, here's a list, in no particular order, of some of the most gimmicky features on the market today. DAN ILIKA/AUTOGUIDE.COM

1 Rolls-Royce's fibre-optic headliner

As far as lighting systems go, the only thing more outlandish than Mercedes-Benz's Swarovski crystal headlights (don't even get us started) is this fibre-optic headliner offered by Rolls-Royce. Because buying a convertible to actually look at the stars is far too peasant-like, the automaker's bespoke division will gladly stitch you a headliner full of as many as 1,600 fiber-optic lights. And people say kids these days don't spend enough time outside.

2 Cadillac's rear camera mirror

Replacing a traditional rear view mirror with a camera display is a sign of the times. It's also a little too gimmicky for our liking. Cadillac claims this fancy digital display, which uses a rear-mounted camera to display a live look at what's behind the car, improves rearward vision by 300 percent compared to a traditional mirror. It's a great idea in theory, but we've tried using it before and just can't get used to it, so it ends up being pretty useless especially at night. Chalk this one up to the old if-it-ain't-broke adage.

3 Cabin perfume dispensers

Speaking of unpleasant odors, cruising around with an air freshener dangling from a rearview mirror is tacky, especially in a pricey premium vehicle. The solution, then, is to integrate fresh scents directly into the car's HVAC system. Mercedes-Benz and BMW have both done this, though it's hard to think of it as anything less than a neat trick to show off to friends. Just believe us when we tell you that the novelty will wear off quicker than the "energy of cool woodlands" scents brought on by BMW's Green Suite of smells.

Boucher's Methot murky

NHL PLAYOFFS

Experience key for Sens coach; blue-liner could still play

Guy Boucher still has a lot of questions to answer as the Senators prepare to open the playoffs on home ice for the first time since 2007. He isn't sure dependable defenceman Marc Methot will be ready, and he doesn't have his forward lines written in stone.

Still, the Ottawa head coach has a pretty good idea of what kind of lineup he wants to put out against the visiting Boston Bruins.

The Atlantic Division rivals open their best-of-seven series Wednesday at the Canadian Tire Centre, and Boucher said he's looking for a playoff-tested lineup that will make sure the Senators get off to a quick start.

"We know we haven't had good first periods against Boston in all four (regular-season) games because we didn't manage the boards well and we got tougher as the game went on, but I would rather start the game tough on the boards and with guys that have experience," Boucher said at Tuesday's practice.

"Guys who have experience in the Stanley Cup and aren't going to freeze in the first period so I'm going to make my lineup according to that."

The Senators would like that lineup to include Methot, who practised with the team Tuesday for the first time since suffering a Sidney Crosby slash to his left pinky finger on March 23.

Boucher said Methot could play Wednesday, but a decision needs to be made whether or not it's in his and the team's best interest to give him a few more days of rest. Game 2 of the series isn't until Saturday afternoon.

I would rather start the game tough on the boards and with guys that have experience.

Ottawa Senators coach Guy Boucher

"It's my decision," Boucher said. "Are we better to go with a guy that's 100 per cent like (Fredrik) Claesson or (Ben) Harpur who have done very well or a guy that's at 85-90 per cent? The decision is do we wait and have him at 100 per cent in three days? He could definitely play and there's no doubt he will play in this series."

Should he return, Methot would be paired with Erik Karlsson, who missed the last three games with a foot injury.

Crosby reached out to Methot about a week following the incident, and the Senators defenceman says he holds no ill will and is ready to return.

"I'm doing everything I can to get back to full strength and feel good so I can be effective for this team," said Methot.

Methot doesn't anticipate wearing a different glove should he play, but expects he would require some freezing. The Ottawa native has had a number of injuries through the course of his career, but said this has been the worst as far as pain.

Karlsson, meanwhile, said he feels good and doesn't anticipate any further issues.

With 17 forwards at his disposal Boucher was going to have to make some tough decisions. At this point it appears Chris Kelly, Ryan Dzingel, Chris Neil, Colin White and Chris DiDomenico will be the odd-men out.

Cassidy nervous ahead of series

Bruce Cassidy knows how to handle the pre-playoff jitters this time.

Returning to the Stanley Cup playoffs as a head coach for the first time since 2003, Ottawaan Cassidy is trusting in his Boston team to smooth over some of the butterflies he feels before the first-round series against the Senators.

"I'll have some nerves, but not a lot," he said after practice Tuesday as his team prepared to travel to Ottawa.

"I feel good about our team."

Cassidy took over the Bruins on Feb. 7 when they fired Claude Julien — the winningest coach in franchise history — and the man who led the team to two Stanley Cup finals, including the 2011 championship. Boston won its first four games under the new coach and then added a six-game winning streak to clinch its first playoff berth since 2014.

In all, the Bruins have gone 18-8 under Cassidy, whose only other NHL head coaching experience was less than two seasons with the Washington Capitals in 2002-04.

"We've played pretty well since he was the captain of the ship," defenceman Kevan Miller said.

Explosion halts game in Dortmund, Juve on top

The first-leg of the quarter-final between Borussia Dortmund and Monaco was called off and rescheduled for Wednesday after three explosions went off near the German team's bus as it set off for the match, injuring defender Marc Bartra.

Trio added to Olympic team

Mikael Kingsbury, Justine Dufour-Lapointe and Andi Naude have been named to Canada's freestyle ski team for the 2018 Winter Olympics.

The three mogul skiers took advantage of their results over the past World Cup season to bypass the long and complex qualification process leading up to the 2018 Pyeongchang Games. Freestyle Canada used the results from several big events in 2017 to select three skiers. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Osuna activated by Jays

As expected, the Blue Jays activated closer Roberto Osuna ahead of their home opener. Osuna had been on the 10-day disabled list due to neck spasms.

Right-hander Casey Lawrence was optioned to triple-A Buffalo to make room. Toronto (1-5) faced Milwaukee (2-5) on Tuesday, the opening game of a nine-game homestand. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Yankees again most valuable baseball team

Forbes ranks the New York Yankees as baseball's most valuable team for the 20th straight year and lists the Tampa Bay Rays with the lowest valuation.

Forbes said Tuesday it estimates the Yankees are worth $3.7 billion US, up 9 per cent from last year. The Dodgers are next at $2.75 billion, a 10 per cent increase.

$1.3B

The Blue Jays were 16th, valued at $1.3B billion.

Boston was third at $2.7 billion, followed by the Chicago Cubs ($2.675 billion), San Francisco ($2.65 billion) and New York Mets ($2 billion).

At the bottom were the Rays ($825 million), Oakland ($880 million), Cincinnati ($915 million) and Cleveland ($920 million).

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

This salad's tender chicken and zippy dressing make it a great noon time meal, especially if it's a leftover dinner because then it was super easy too.

Ready in 22 minutes

Prep time: 10
Cook time: 12
Serves 4

Ingredients

- 2 chicken breasts
- 1/4 - 1/2 head of purple cabbage, thinly sliced
- 1/4 - 1/2 head of green cabbage, thinly sliced
- 2 carrots, shredded
- 1 red pepper, thinly sliced
- 1/2 cucumber, peeled and sliced
- 2 spring onions, sliced
- handful cilantro, chopped
- 1/3 cup peanuts, chopped (optional)

Dressing

- 1 Tbsp sesame oil
- 1 Tbsp soy sauce
- 1/2 tsp sriracha
- 1 Tbsp vegetable oil
- 1 tsp fish sauce
- 1 tsp sugar

Directions

1. Fill a skillet with water and season with salt and pepper. Bring to a simmer. Place chicken breasts in water and cook 10 to 12 minutes, depending on how thick the breasts are. Remove and place on a clean plate. Use two forks to shred the chicken.
2. In a small bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients. In a large serving bowl, toss together vegetables and chicken. Drizzle dressing over salad and toss again.
3. Serve salad in bowls and garnish with cilantro and chopped peanuts.

★ IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
This is a good day for important discussions about wills, inheritances, shared property and insurance issues. All parties involved will be reasonable and mutually sympathetic.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
You might be able to mend broken fences with a partner or close friend today, because people feel sympathetic toward each other. It's a relatively easygoing day.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
Co-workers are supportive today, especially in your efforts to get better organized. You might feel particularly tenderhearted toward a pet today.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
If you are involved in a creative project or the arts, you will be productive today because you are imaginative and open to new ideas. You also will feel sympathetic toward children.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
You will enjoy cocooning at home today, because you feel the need to pamper yourself and take it easy. Family discussions will be gentle and sympathetic.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your imagination is heightened today, which is good news for those of you who act, teach, write, sell and market. Trust your far-out ideas.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
If shopping today, you will be tempted to spend too much money on luxurious items. It's the age-old problem of having champagne tastes on a beer wallet.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Today the Moon is in your sign dancing with Neptune, which makes you sensitive to the needs of others. It also heightens your imagination.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You will find it easy to put the needs of others before your own today, because you feel somewhat selfless. You genuinely want to help anyone who is less fortunate. (This is admirable.)

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
A discussion with a female friend will be idealistic today. It also will be a bonding experience, because each of you will listen with sympathy toward the other person.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
People see you in a favorable light today, especially bosses, parents and VIPs. They see you as someone who is reasonable, sympathetic and kind.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
Do whatever you can to get away from all this because you need to escape. You need fresh air and a chance to discover adventure! Travel somewhere, if possible.
